PROFESSIONAL PROFILE

I have varied work experience through which I have developed skills and aptitudes to manage myself in a complex and dynamic environment, maintaining excellent referential values and establishing a great capacity to interact with personnel of different hierarchies, as good interpersonal relationships with my work team, under an environment of respect and dedication to work. A self-motivated person always achieves maximum personal and professional development while generating significant contributions to the organization and the work team. I'm currently in the last semester of my first degree in software engineering at UNITEC (Mexico University of Technology). At the same time studying my first year of my second degree in IT at Torrens of Australia. My objective is to secure a responsible job where I can implement what I have learned and studied, develop my knowledge, and gain further experience.
